LARGEST GAME FISH.

The Tuna Sometimes Attains a Weight of 2,000 Pounds.

Charles Frederick Holder, the Callfornia naturalist, thus describes that remarkable fish, the tuna: "The tuna is a pelagic fish, a free lance, an ocean rover, a sort of swaggering musketeer of the sea, the largest of what may be termed the game or bony fishes, attaining a maximum weight of nearly 2,000 pounds and an approximate a fish is very exceptional, though specimens weighing 1.500 pounds have been taken on the New England coast. I once entered a school of such tunas in the Santa Catalina channel in a big launch. The sel of divided to port and starboard a we passed through it, and I had a view of one or two fishes that appeared to be more than

far as the mouth of the St. Lawrence. Yonkers Statesman. They are found in the Mediterranean and north to the Loffoden island, yet so far the efforts of anglers, except at Santa Catalina, have failed to take them with the rod. Even bere there is a stretch of but eight miles or so where they can be satisfactorily played and taken with rod and reel.

"This region lies on the north side of Santa Catalina, from Avalon to Long point, and to the east as many more, facing the north, and generally smooth-more like a Scottish loch than s tishing ground twenty miles out at sea."-Chicago News.

THE FRENCH DUEL. Tricke That Are Invoked to Make the Meeting Bloodless.

A French paper has been describing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham the various contrivances to insure pistol duels ending in "coffee for two." A favorite trick, it seems, is to use projectiles that look like ordinary lead bullets, but crumble to pieces when fired. in more serious cases bullets are used of smaller caliber than the pistol, thus lessening their penetrating power.

Sometimes the wad is intentionally left out, so that when the duelists face each other with the pistois held downward the bullets roll out. In many cases bullets of the right caliber are used, but only with a third of the proper powder charge, so that they are practically barmless. A variation of this trick is to load with a double powder charge, which also causes the bullets to go wide of the mark. This, however, is dangerous to the spectators. Again, well meaning seconds sometimes use the right bullets and the right charge, but stiffen the triggers so port of the play as a unit. The oppor that the extra pressure causes the bul- tunity for dramatic effects in "Graus amusing device is the use of pistols fitted with a sort of secret safety valve, which opens when the weapon is loaded, so that the bullet drops out and only the powder charge remains .-

Franklin, Pa., Aug. 24. - Former Congressman Joseph C. Sibley, who withdrew as a candidate for congress on the Republican ticket in the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania district, was arrested on a warrant charging "conspiracy to debauch voters."

Mr. Sibley was released on his own recognizance to appear before Justice of the Peace Perry at Warren on Aug.

His arrest came a few hours after he had announced his withdrawal from the congressional race.

In the recent Republican nominating primary Sibley defeated Congressman N. P. Wheeler, and the charge was at once made that his victory was due to the lavish use of money.

When, in obedience to law, he filed his statement of campaign expenses and it was seen that he had spent $17,000 in Warren county and $42,500 in the entire district, an audit of his expenses was demanded and ordered by the court.

Sibley had spent a sum that averaged $4 for every voter in the entire

ROOSEVELT RAPS VICE PRESIDENT

Deciares For Clean Politics Combined With Efficiency.

Declares the Only Way a Politician Can Serve His Party Is by Efficiently Serving the People-Farmers Cheer Him.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 24.-Mr. Roosevelt came into Vice President Sherman's home town and began his long speechmaking tour by swatting Mr. Sherman. The colonel didn't mention names, because that wasn't necessary.

Ten thousand farmers and their wives gathered in a grove and waited for the colonel to hit Sunny Jim. They didn't have long to wait, and they roared with delight when it came. The occasion was the second annual reunion picnic of the Herkimer and Oneida Grangers. Ostensibly it was a time for farm talk exclusively, but Mr. Roosevelt had other things on his mind. The colonel, after he got through with a political stab, devoted himself to an interesting delivery of a speech on what the farmers ought to do. Mr. Roosevelt as he arose to speak, swept his eye over the picturesque crowd and it lighted upon Senator Davenport.

Tribute to Sherman's Foe.

The colonel beamed. "I am glad to see on the platform," he shouted, "Senator Davenport." The seats shook and the crowd gave the senator a hand greater even than T. R. had received. It was a real ovation. Davenport, ardent supporter of the direct primaries, Hughes man and a bitter foe of Sherman, who has been working to throw was immediately begun by the office him out, and has repudiated him, was furred. He hadn't estimated his popularity, apparently. "I am glad," the larity, apparently. "I am glad," the colonel continued when the cheering UNWRITTEN LAW had ceased, "because the only kind of politics I care for is the kind of politics where decency is combined with efficiency, and I hold that the only way by which a politician can efficiently serve his party is by helping that party efficienly serve the people, and because the senator and those around him who have stood for those principles are on the platform."

Mr. Roosevelt had to stop several moments in order to finish his tribute. "You will at least notice that my utterances are free from ambiguity." It was this sort of thing that made the colonel solid right at the outset of his more of it, but it didn't come. At the end of Mr. Roosevelt's address, however, there were repeated cries for Davenport.

"You have listened to a magnificent speech by a magnificent man," he said. "He represents to my mind better than any other man since Abraham Lincoln the heart and the conscience and the courage of the great body of our people. He has been my ideal. I want to stand for the things he stands for." Then he clasped hands with the

Mr. Roosevelt's address contained very few startling utterances. It was more of a sermon than anything else, but was an interesting and instructive sermon, and the big audience followed the speaker with marked atten-

Put It Up to the Farmer.

The colonel put the matter directly up to the farmers who came to hear him. He began with conservation of natural farming resources and he ended with a tribute to the Civil War veterans, who turned out in large numbers. He told the survivors of the rebellion that they were favored men, men who had really done things. He spoke as one soldier to another. He brought out the necessity for the farmers to be represented capably upon civic commissions. He said that the cities must not grow at the expense of the country. He advised the farmers to take to the heed for the call of scientific methods and not to scoff at them.

The ex-president told the farmers her divorce suit against her husband, business conditions so that they shall granted a divorce ten minutes after be better able to meet the problems she took the stand. She was given ali- abandoned. facing them.

Strangled to Death Playing on Swing. Philadelphia, Aug. 24.-Edward Burton, twelve years old, of 2529 Dakota street, was found hanging in the cellar of his home by his mother. The boy died a half hour later. He had been playing in the cellar and had rigged up a rope swing. In some manner the boy became entangled about the neck in the swing and was unable to release himself. In his struggles the rope became tightened around his neck and strangled him.

COLONEL TALKS TO UTICANS.

Gives Advice to Farmers How to Be Happy.

Tillers of Soil Must Take Advice From Giants of Business World-Home Life Should Be Much Happier-Take the Condition of the Hired Man and His Wife Into Consideration.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 23.-There are no two public questions of more vital importance to the future of this country than the problem of conservation and the problem of the betterment of public life. Moreover, these two problems are really interdependent, for neither the prime physical asset-the physical industrial and commercial welfare, all farm and the shop. our material development of every kind, depends in the last resort upon tility of the soil.

Problem Old One.

In one sense this problem with old. Wherever civilizations have hiththen to fall. No nation can develop a a certain point the city movement is horoughly healthy. Yet it is a strange and lamentable fact that always hitherto after this point has been reached the city has tended to develop at the expense of the country by draining the country of what is best in it and making an insignificant return for this

In consequence in the past every civlization in its later stages has tended really to witness those conditions under which "the cities prosper and the men decay." There are ugly signs that bese tendencies are at work in this ration of ours. But very fortunately we see now what never before was seen in any civilization-an aroused and alert public interest in the probtem, a recognition of its gravity and a desire to attempt its solution.

The problem does not consist merely in the growth of the city. Such a growth in itself is a good thing and not a bad thing for the country. The problem consists in the growth of the city at the expense of the country, and even where this is not the case in so great an equality of growth in power and interest as to make the city more attractive than the country and therefore apt to drain the country of the people who ought to live therein.

The human side of the rural life problem is to make the career of the farmer and the career of the farm laborer as attractive and as remunerative as corresponding careers in the city. Now, I am well aware that the farmer must himself take the lead in bringing this about. A century and a quarter ago the wise English farmer. Arthur Young, wrote of the efforts to improve French wool:

"A cultivator at the head of a sheep farm of 3,000 or 4,000 acres would in a few years do more for their wools than all the academicians and philosophers will effect in ten centuries." It is absurd to think that any man who has studied the subject only theoretically is fit to direct those who practically work at the matter. But. friends, I wish to insist to you here, to you practical men who own and work your farms, that it is an equally pernicions absurdity for the practical man to refuse to benefit by the work of the student

The English farmer I have quoted-Young-was a practical farmer, but he was also a scientific farmer.

Why Farmers Lag. One reason why the great business men of today, the great industrial lead has tended to sag behind the others is that they are far more willing and indeed eager to profit by expert and technical knowledge-the knowledge factories no great industrial concern can nowadays be carried on save by the aid of a swarm of men who have received a high technical education in chemistry, in engineering, in elericity and in one or more of scores of special subjects. The big business man, the big railway man, does not ask college trained experts to tell him how to run his business, but he does ask numbers of them each to give him expert advice and aid some one point indispensable to his business. He finds this man usually in some graduate of a technical school or college in which he has been trained for his life work.

In just the same way the farmers should benefit by the advice of the technical men who have been trained n phases of the very work the farmer does. I am not now speaking of the man who has had an ordinary general training, whether in school or college. While there should undoubtedly be them can be successfully solved such a training as a foundation (exsave on condition that there is at least | tent differing according to the kind of a measurable success in the effort to work each boy intends to do as a man). solve the other. ### Interest to Farm Life.

The farmer, however, must not only make his land pay, but he must make i which we have to deal is very, very country life interesting for himself and for his wife and his sons and erto sprung up they have always tend- daughters. Our people as a whole ed to go through certain stages and should realize the infinite possibilities of life in the country, and every efreal civilization without cities. Up to fort should be made to make these possibilities more possible. From the beginning of time it has been the man raised in the countryand usually the man born in the country-who has been most apt to ren der the services which every nation most needs. Turning to the list of American statesmen, it is extraordinary to see how large a proportion started as farm boys. But it is rather sad to see that in recent years most of these same boys have ended their lives as men living in cities.

It often happens that the good conditions of the past can be regained not by going back, but by going forward. We cannot recreate what is dead; we cannot stop the march of events. But we can direct this march and out of the new conditions develop something better than the past knew. Henry Clay was a farmer, who lived all his life in the country; Washington was a farmer, who lived and died in the country. And we of this nation ought to make it our business to see that the conditions are made such that farm life in the future shall not only de velop men of the stamp of Washington and Henry Clay, but shall be so attractive that these men may continue as farmers, for remember that Washington and Henry Clay were successful farmers I hope that things will so shape themselves that the farmer can have a great career and yet end his life as a farmer, so that the city man will look forward to living in the country rather than the country man to living in the city.

Farmers should learn how to combine effectively, as has been done in industry. I am particularly glad to speak to the grange, for I heartily believe in farmers' organizations, and we should all welcome every step taken toward an increasing co-operation among farmers. The importance of such movements cannot be overestimated, and through such intelligent joint action it will be possible to improve the market just as much as to have certain qualities which the city man has lost. These qualities offset those which the city man has and himself has not. The two should put on equal terms and the countalent be given the same opportunity as the city talent to express itself and to contribute to the welfare of the world in which we live.

The country church should be made a true social center, alive to every need of the community, standing for a broad individual outlook and development, taking the lead in work and in recreation, caring more for conduct than for dogma, more for ethical, spiritual, practical betterment than for merely formal plety. The country fair offers far greater possibilities for continuous and healthy usefulness than it at present affords.

The country school should be made a vital center for economic, social and educational co-operation. It is naturally fitted to be such a center for those engaged in commercial farming and still more for those engaged in domestic farming, for those who live on and by the small farms they themselves own. The problem of the farm is really the problem of the family that lives on the farm. On all these questions there is need of intelligent study, such as marks the books of Professor Batley of Cornell and of Horace Plunkett's book on the "Rural Life Problems of the United States."

Laborers on Farms.

One feature of the problem should be recognized by the farmer at once and an effort made to deal with it. It is our duty and our business to consider the farm laborer exactly as we consider the farmer. No country life can be satisfactory when the owners of farms tend, for whatever reason, to go away to live in cities instead of working their farms, and, moreover, it cannot be really satisfactory when the labor system is so managed that there is for part of the year a demand for labor which cannot be met and during another part of the year no demand for labor at all, so that the farmers tend to rely on migratory laborers who come out to work in the country with no permanent interest in it and with no prospect of steady employment

It is exceedingly difficult to make a good citizen out of a man who can't count upon some steadiness and conand rural life policies are really two and land only fifty miles from New tinuity in the work which means to him his livelihood. Economic conditions on the farm-in variety and kind of crop growing especially as distributnation can prosper unless in dealing years been proved to possess a really ed in time and in housing for the men possible for the man who labors for the farmer to be steadily employed under conditions which foster his self respect and tend for his development.

Above all, the conditions of farm life must always be shaped with a view to the welfare of the farmer's wife and the farm laborer's wife quite as much as to the welfare of the farmer and the farm laborer. To have the woman a mere drudge is at least as bad as to have the man a mere drudge. It is every whit as important to introduce new machines to economize her labor within the house as it is to introduce machinery to increase the effectiveness of his labor outside the house.

I haven't the slightest sympathy with any movement which looks to excusing men and women for the nonperformance of duty and fixes attention only on rights and not on duties. The woman who shirks her duty as housewife, as mother, is a contemptible creature, just as the corresponding the welfare of the woman is even more important than the welfare of the man for the mother is the real atlas who bears aloft in her strong and tender arms the destiny of the world.

She deserves bonor and consideration such as no man should receive. She forfeits all claim to this bonot and consideration if she shirks her du-
